

1) CONNECT THE DOTS

You are most likely to see young mammals engrossed in play, but birds and reptiles are no exception. Animals spend a lot of time playing different kinds of games. Animals sometimes play alone and sometimes with their parents and friends. The most common form of play is fighting or chasing. Young ones explore their surroundings and face unfamiliar situations while playing. It engages and strengthens their bodies and brains. What's more, it's such a good time!

ELEPHANTS CAN COMMUNICATE WITH EACH OTHER. A SHAKE OF THE HEAD IS AN INVITATION TO PLAY!
