Agatha the owl was the first to gather her wits. “Twi-twoo!” she hooted. “I would like to be an eagle, Magician. It must be wonderful!” “Very well, Agatha,” said Magnus, as he turned the pages of his magic book. “As soon as I find the right spell, I will turn you into an eagle. Ah, here it is. On page 12,643!” Then he opened his arms wide and pronounced: “Abracadabra! By the demons, fairies and werewolves, this owl shall be turned into an eagle!” In the cave there was a flash of lightning and a mighty clap of thunder. But oh dear – something had gone wrong . . .

Instead of a hissing cat, there was an ugly grey mouse. “That’s what you get for sneering at others,” said Magnus the magician. That day Catastrophe the cat was made to sit in the corner as a punishment. At first she was angry, but then she let her ears fall forward and asked for forgiveness. She did the right thing: it’s not nice to sneer at others – especially mighty magicians!
