But he didn't know about life underwater, so he had to learn.

"When you're swimming alone and you find yourself in danger," the fish advised him, "hide in a sea anemone or some coral."

"Thank you kindly, fish," said Toby, "for helping me become a proper seahorse."

“Always swim in a group,”
said the clever dolphin.
“That gives better camouflage
and protects you from danger.”

“If you find yourself alone,
you’ll do well to swim away
quickly.”

Toby thanked him for his advice and swam on.
