Build A Car

But how? The garage was full of all kinds of tools and devices, such as hammers, pliers, drills, screws, discarded discs and gears. Luckily there were also some drawings of engines and various plans, which boys studied carefully and they had done this, Tip thought hard for a while. Then he made a few sketches, showing his vision of the car they would make together. “Is it going to be a pedal car?” asked Top with disappointment. “Yes, but it’ll also be our very own automobile, built with our own hands,” said Tip proudly.

When Tip tightened the last screw, they had a full week's work behind them. "Finished!" he announced. "Now let's go to the petrol station for fuel." "Petrol station?" said Top, surprised. "But Flash is a pedal car!" "I said fuel, not petrol," said Tip. When they reached the petrol station, a beautiful car was being filled up. Top looked at it with admiration. "It's a lovely car all right," said Tip, "but the gentleman didn't make it himself. It can't beat our car!" Then he bought snacks for the two of them. Only then did Top realize what Tip had meant by 'fuel'.
