Who are you?" asks Robot, rolling his eyes. "Why, we're astronauts of course!" says one of the boys. "I'm Tip and he's Top." Robot thinks about this, the parts in his head making a creaking sound as they turn. "Confirmed," announces Robot at last. "Please come aboard. We will be travel companions. There is much for us to do." Tip and Top are delighted. "Hurray! We're flying to the Moon!" In the blink of an eye they are inside the rocket. Are you ready too? Belt up, here goes . . . we're flying!

Little by little Tip and Top return to the space ship. “Never mind, we can dream about the Moon when we’re back on Earth,” the boys console each other. But something’s happening – someone is landing. Another astronaut calls over to them. “Hello there, boys!” From the rocket, Tip and Top smile and wave at him. “Good luck, fellow astronaut! We’re expected back on Earth!”

Tip & Top On the Moon

What's it like on the Moon? Ask Tip and Top, two boys who always find their way and figure out what to do. So when they meet a surprised robot and he asks who they are, they reply: "Who are we? Why, we're astronauts of course!" Moments later, they and the robot are flying to the Moon in a rocket. Why not join them? This pop-up book by celebrated Czech artist Vojtěch Kubašta may be several decades old, but its charm for boys, girls and their parents is timeless.
