Tip & Top

At the Zoo

Delighted, Tip and Top enter the zoo. But what's this? No sooner are they past the gate than they stop in their tracks. Sitting high on a rock just a few yards from the boys are two fierce-looking lions—staring straight at them! “Golly, Tip!” says Top in alarm. “Why don’t you go ahead? I’ll catch you up.” Tip doesn’t like this idea at all. “Here are some buckets,” says the monkey, handing them to the boys as if nothing is going on. “Help me carry the water. The animals must be very thirsty.” “Maybe they’re hungry too,” says Tip with a gulp.

A giraffe, a camel, a zebra, a kangaroo, a monkey ... Are the boys really at the zoo and not in some distant foreign land? Tip and Janie have disguised themselves as Bedouins and are riding about on camels, like lords of the desert. And Top? He has painted an Indian cow red! Imagine that! "Now you're all stripy, like a zebra," he laughs. Having watched him with interest for a while, Mrs. Kangaroo asks: "Could you spare me a little of your precious time, sir?" "Why of course, dear lady, with great pleasure!"

Tip & Top

At the Zoo

A giraffe, a camel, a zebra, a kangaroo, a monkey ... Is this a zoo or a faraway foreign land? "Welcome to the zoo!" says a keeper in a blue cap, as he makes a little bow. Grunter the pig, his helper, sits at the window of the ticket office, welcoming newcomers and feeling important. Tip and Top have never been to the zoo before, so everything in it is special to them. Come with them for a walk in the zoo, the home of animals from the whole world. This charming pop-up book by celebrated Czech artist Vojtěch Kubašta is a truly heart-warming read.
