A thievish paw is holding onto the cabinet door. Which foodie has climbed up there to look for something to eat?

A small squirrel monkey doesn't enjoy juicy food. That's why it dries it out first, using its tail instead of a dish towel.

Do you see? The oven light is on! Can you hear? There's something inside, hissing! Could it be a cake, baking? Or is it some hissing fan of heat?

An empty honey jar! What kind of a big, brown, hairy creature crawled between the kitchen cabinets in order to get this goodie?

A small animal with thick fur and long shaggy tail has curled up in the freezer. It must be used to freezing temperatures. What can it be?

Some fans of nectar are circling around the flower bouquet: a beautiful butterfly and a fruit bat. Its wings resemble an umbrella.

A fop in black tails and a white breast has sat down to feast in the fridge. Can you see the leftovers? Which cold-loving fish-enthusiast is hiding here?

The sweet-smelling fruit has attracted a couple of gourmets: a large tropical butterfly and rose chafer who'd love to feast on it.

A macaque's gotten hungry for something good!

A bear is enjoying itself in the cabinet, not minding a bit that it barely fits inside. It's happy to have discovered the honey. Bears love it, after all. Yummy!

A python has nestled down on the grate. It really likes to bathe in warmth!

An arctic fox has come to cool down. Its beautiful coat made it feel a little bit too warm outside. This is so much better!

It's a happy penguin! It has a full belly and lazes about in its favourite low temperatures. Its thick feathers are pretty much impervious to cold.
