THE ANIMALS AND THEIR BAND

Meanwhile, in the drawing room of a fine chateau, a usually quiet, modest monkey sits down at a sweet little piano. And lo and behold, she turns out to be a virtuoso! How true it is that still waters run deep... The dog and the cat have sailed here with their friend the bear. They, too, join the band, and change into their costumes to prove it. Their singing voices are almost as breathtakingly lovely as those of real opera singers.

What truly splendid music! Everyone enjoys a lively march. One, two, left, right – in their colourful uniforms, the marching animals look like soldiers. Their chins are nicely raised, their legs kick high. The dog in the band was missing one thing. A great big drum! So he borrowed one from Bobby from the military band. Now he's pounding it as if his life depends on it. Well, someone must make the rhythm! The other animals march merrily along the street...

One day, the animals decide to form a band. The frog will play the bass and the dog will play the whistle. The mouse will tap its little foot to the rhythm and the hedgehog will hold the sheet music. The whole animal kingdom will fall under the spell of music! Read another unconventional three-dimensional book by the celebrated artist Vojtěch Kubašta, whose work continues to be admired all over the world.
