Kubašta

In a little village by the woods, there lives a girl called Little Red Riding Hood. You can't miss her—she's the one wearing a cloak as red as fresh strawberries. Today it's her grandmother's name day, and so Little Red's mum tells the girl to bring her grandmother some cake, wine, and other goodies. "Don't go through the forest, though!" she says. But it takes so much time to go around the forest! And so Little Red doesn't heed her mum's warning and takes a shortcut through the woods. She'll arrive sooner that way!

The woods are dark and deep.

All of a sudden there's a sound of footsteps ... Who could it be? Then a muzzle appears among the branches, followed by a large mouth, and then a whole wolf is there. "What is it you're carrying, little girl?" he asks, eyes gleaming eagerly. And Little Red, ever trusting, tells him everything! She's taking a basket of goodies to her grandma, dear sir Wolf, just over there by the forest. The wolf senses an opportunity. Quickly, he asks about the precise address of grandma's house, and speeds off like the wind.

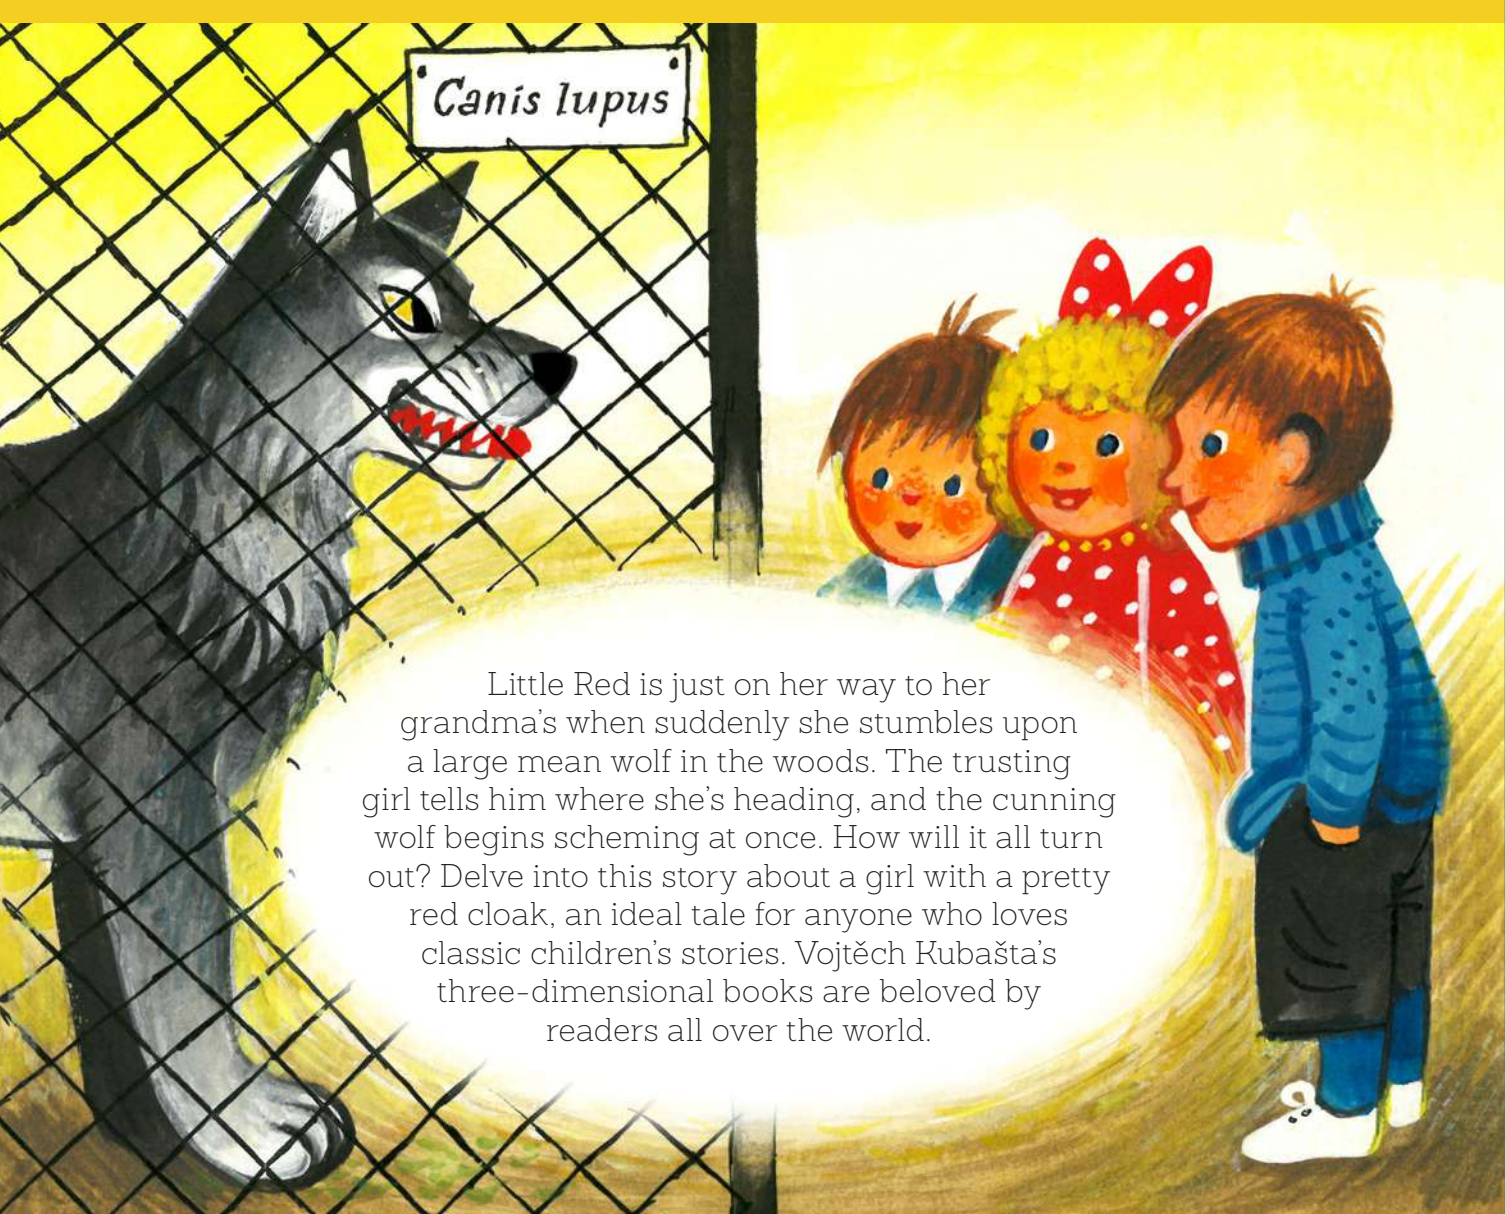

Finding grandma's house is easy; after all, the careless Little Red described how to get there perfectly. He storms into the room where grandma's resting, and gobbles the shocked old woman up like it's nothing! And Little Red's about to come in any minute ... The wolf puts on the nightcap that slipped from grandma's head, takes her pair of glasses from the bedside table, nestles down in the blankets, and waits ...

And now Little Red has arrived. She walks through the door and stops, surprised. "What great big eyes you have, grandma!" "All the better to see you with," howls the wolf. "What great big ears you have, grandma!" "All the better to hear you with," says the wolf. "What great big mouth you have, grandma!" "All the better to eat you with!" roars the wolf. He leaps out of the bed and does with Little Red as he did with grandma.

Little Red is just on her way to her grandma's when suddenly she stumbles upon a large mean wolf in the woods. The trusting girl tells him where she's heading, and the cunning wolf begins scheming at once. How will it all turn out? Delve into this story about a girl with a pretty red cloak, an ideal tale for anyone who loves classic children's stories. Vojtěch Kubašta's three-dimensional books are beloved by readers all over the world.
