THROUGH MY EYES

On the toilet, I always forget myself.
My parents don't understand why.

Thanks, Mum.
You're the best!

Shoes, funny socks, hairy legs...

... yippee! Can I pet you?

Come on, Mum...

Oh no, not a kiss!

I still have a lot to get done this evening, Dad...

Hi!

Do you have to jump in every puddle?

Stop what you're doing to look at a stone?

Avoid cracks in the pavement at all costs?

Talk to your stuffed animal when everyone tells you it's just a toy?

You do? Great! Then you'll like this book.

In it, toys come to life, shoelaces twist and turn, toothpaste has no end, a puddle becomes an ocean, and climbing a tree is like conquering the world's highest mountain. Everything must be explored and experienced... Many adults don't get this. We must be patient with them: they have forgotten what it is like to be a child – how fascinating every day can be, even the most ordinary. All you have to do is look at things closely. Through your own eyes...
